The Government should provide a new emergency department for Coronavirus patients. Hospital parking bays should be designated for Coronavirus patients to ensure they don’t infect others. Andy Burnham MP: “We have only just started to understand the full scale of the crisis we face. Government statistics show that only half of all the infected people have been tested. This is despite the Government saying they will have sufficient tests. We need to urgently get supplies of personal protective equipment (PPE) to the frontline. Currently, four out of five NHS Trusts are running low. The Government must urgently ensure that the NHS has enough ventilators, testing equipment and PPE. “I have been in touch with the Chief Medical Officer and the Government has supported me in calling for a new emergency department to be established to treat patients with COVID-19. “We need a new emergency department to ensure that patients with respiratory symptoms are not kept waiting. Patients could be made to wait in the community before they are taken to hospital if a beds are available. The NHS is currently looking at other A&E departments to establish the best way to support patients with acute respiratory illnesses. The emergency department at Earle Haven Hospital is the only existing specialist hospital to treat people with severe acute respiratory illness. The centre is a standalone A&E that will take in patients regardless of how ill they are. This is similar to Leeds Teaching Hospitals and Royal 0cc13bf012
