[The antidepressive efficacy of d-amphetamine in p.o. consumption and in diazepam-induced drinking in rats (author's transl)]. The antidepressive effect of d-amphetamine in p.o. consumption and in diazepam-induced drinking of rats was investigated. The effect in p.o. consumption were studied in two ways: (1) d-amphetamine was given 4 hours before the test and the p.o. consumption was evaluated in an extinction test 1 hour after the test. (2) D-amphetamine was given 2 hours before the test and its effect was evaluated 1 hour later. In both tests, a significant increase of p.o. consumption was demonstrated. (3) d-Amphetamine was given 2 hours before the test and its effect was evaluated 1 hour later. A tendency of reduction in p.o. consumption was found. (4) d-Amphetamine was given 30 min before the test and its effect was evaluated 30 min. and 1 hour later. A tendency of increase in p.o. consumption was demonstrated. In the case of drinking test, a significant increase in the water intake was demonstrated when d-amphetamine was given. The effect of d-amphetamine was antagonized by prior administration of imipramine. Therefore, it is suggested that the effect of d-amphetamine in drinking test reflects the influence of the decrease in levels of 5-hydroxytryptamine (5-HT) in the brain.
