They simply ignored the fact that most of these herbs/plants have some sort of explicit medicinal use in the traditional usage of those cultures. This "analysis" has been done by people who have no understanding about the actual science. They are not botanists, herbalists, chemists, clinical pharmacologists, or any combination of those. They simply used some of the information that people had found online to do a "what I thought was obvious" kind of analysis. The use of the word "ancient" should not be taken to mean that the plants themselves were "ancient", unless you are a botanist (because plants can evolve and change over time) or a physicist or chemist (because some plants are composed entirely of chemical compounds). When an herb is "ancient", it is old, by which I mean that it has been used for thousands of years. It is not ancient as in "ancient" like humans have evolved over time. If you want to know "

Download Ebook Farmakope Indonesia Edisi 3ISpecificity and Sensitivity of Pre-operative Imaging in Symptomatic Versus Asymptomatic Females Undergoing Hysterectomy. To determine the specificity and sensitivity of pre-operative imaging studies in females undergoing hysterectomy with or without salpingectomy. In this IRB-approved, HIPAA compliant retrospective study, we identified all female patients who underwent a hysterectomy at a single institution during the period July 1, 2013 - July 1, 2018. All imaging studies were reviewed to identify imaging studies that were done in pre-operative clinical setting. Imaging studies included pelvic ultrasound, transvaginal ultrasound, and pelvic MRI with ovarian venous sampling. Sensitivity was defined as the ability of pre-operative imaging to correctly identify all pre-operative cases with endometrioma or adnexal mass. Specificity was defined as the ability to correctly identify all pre-operative cases without endometrioma or adnexal mass. For all imaging modalities, we calculated the positive and negative predictive values. During the study period, we identified 602 female patients who underwent a hysterectomy. Of the 602 hysterectomies, 132 (22%) underwent salpingectomy. Of the hysterectomies, only 32 (5.3%) included an endometrioma. A total of 215 pre-operative imaging studies were identified. For patients with endometrioma, pelvic ultrasound and pelvic MRI had high sensitivity (96% and 95%, respectively) and specificity (94% and 95%, respectively). Pelvic ultrasound and pelvic MRI were more sensitive in detecting endometriomas, with higher negative predictive values, than transvaginal ultrasound (62% and 88% vs. 19% and 59%). For patients without endometrioma, pelvic ultrasound and pelvic MRI had similar sensitivity and specificity (91% and 99%, and 86% and 99%, respectively). Pelvic ultrasound and pelvic MRI have similar sensitivity and specificity for pre-operative identification of endometriomas and adnexal masses, in patients undergoing hysterectomy.Q: returning a function in a function in R If I have a function result
