Every single element of the gameplay will be modeled after the real-life style of movement. Playmaking and ball control are key factors in the evolution of moving the ball, dealing with defenders and playing passes and dribbles. And to make the technology really come to life, each player has different animation paths that determine how they move, and can be further refined and played by the developer. The variety of player styles presented in FIFA 22 will add another level of fun and excitement to the game. In addition to the new animations and full body dynamics, the player positions are now composed of multiple parts (legs, body, head) and each part can be varied in position and in speed. The player movement in FIFA 22 is more dynamic than ever before, and will make the game a brand new experience for players as well as for viewers. FIFA “Bull and Bear” Simulation Another important feature in FIFA 22 is the “Bull and Bear” simulation – The inside view of the player will show an increased level of individual detail, while the outside view will be increased in movement. By placing individual players next to each other, it becomes possible to see players on the outside of the pack, and it is now possible to see the movement on the wing areas and through the centre of the field. The outside view and the “Bull and Bear” simulation are also essential elements for an intelligent defensive system and will affect match outcomes. Tactics from the “Bull and Bear” Simulation The tactical AI of the players in the “Bull and Bear” simulation is also more intelligent. This will improve situational awareness and give the player more control. . HyperReal Player Ratings The player ratings in FIFA 22 are also a new element that will affect match outcomes and shape the gameplay. Players’ ratings will also have an impact on the development of the game and it will allow the developers to create dynamic gameplay according to player strengths and weaknesses. The game will also be dynamic and will be playable in all skill levels. Whilst not a highlight of the build, the clubs are also going to feature additional content, including new third-person view videos. . New Features FIFA Soccer is about more than just the beautiful game on the pitch. With a wide selection of communities and features around the world, FIFA touches the lives of the millions of fans every day

I would have thought that I could just use TextField in the standard way and the field would work, but that doesn't seem to be the case. What is the proper way to implement this kind of behaviour in a SwiftUI view? I'm
