I'm always embarrassed when I see posts critical of Israel and Jews in general on social media. Especially when these posts criticize an Israel government spokesperson. I'm not a supporter of the Israeli government, but as a Jew and progressive and person who values the right of self-determination I am very much concerned with an Israel that is not a democracy. So why is it so hard to express outrage against the Israeli government or certain government officials when they appear to be wrong, or at least ignore basic human rights? Why do we sit idly by while the IDF shoots and disables innocent Palestinian men and women and imprisons hundreds of thousands of Palestinians in Gaza? Why do we not support the BDS movement when Israel is the only country that prohibits boycotts of its own citizens? The Torah calls out the rich for not giving to the poor and the poor for making complaints against the rich. But what happens when the rich and powerful make laws that are morally wrong? As Jews, we, too, have a moral obligation to make our voices heard even when it means risking criticism from the political left. We need to continue to speak out against Israel's bad human rights practices until we e79caf774b
