morphology in Diamond Blackfan anemia: results of kidney biopsy and autopsy. We performed kidney biopsy and autopsy in eight patients with Diamond Blackfan anemia. At autopsy, we found a shrunken kidney, a contracted kidney, and the absence of affected kidneys. The renal cortex was replaced by fibrous tissue. Glomeruli were hyalinized with disrupted capillary loops, and cells in the paratubular interstitium appeared immature. Ultrastructural features were distorted myofibrils, membrane-bound electron-dense granules, and an abnormal thin myofibrillar crest. The basement membrane was often reduced and thickened. We propose that the ultrastructural changes in kidney biopsy specimens, as well as the renal shrinkage and absence of the kidneys, reflect impaired cell proliferation.[A rare cause of back pain: posterior protrusion and pseudo-cylindricity of the vertebral bodies (author's transl)]. Posterior protrusion and pseudo-cylindricity of the vertebral bodies may be mistaken for myelopathy. Only this angulated position of the spine gives rise to the symptoms of the syndrome: headaches, back pain and as a consequence also psychiatric disturbances. Under radiography no signs of myelopathy can be found. The so-called double vertebral column may be the only morphological sign of the syndrome, by means of which the diagnosis is established. If the syndrome is severe, the patient must be treated surgically with vertebrectomy and fusion. In the post-operative period, no recurrences have been found in the long term.Spinal muscular atrophy. Patients with spinal muscular atrophy (SMA) may never walk and should be expected to live for many years. A range of health professionals, including the Microvascular Ischemia, Oxidative Stress, and Mitochondrial Damage in Patients With Ischemic Heart Disease. Ischemic myocardium might be characterized by decreased perfusion and insufficient oxygen supply. Moreover, mitochondrial damage and oxidative stress are also present in ischemic myocardium. Under long-term ischemia, mitochondria might be damaged and have a reduced reserve capacity. The aim of this study was to assess the correlation of microvascular ischemia, oxidative stress, and mitochondrial damage with the ischemic heart disease (IHD) severity evaluated by echocardiography. The study included 32 patients with IHD and 32 healthy volunteers. Skin microvascular perfusion was assessed using laser speckle contrast analysis, and the levels of serum malondialdehyde, glutathione peroxidase, and superoxide dismutase-1 were determined by spectrophotometry. Two-dimensional echocardiography was performed to evaluate the left ventricular ejection fraction (LVEF) and left ventricular diastolic (E/A) and systolic (s) waves. Ultrasound Doppler imaging was used to measure the left ventricular isovolumetric relaxation time (IVRT). The microvascular perfusion and the E/A ratio decreased, whereas the IVRT and the IVRT/III ratio
