Importance of parasympathetic innervation of the heart in the hyperkalemic ventricular dysrhythmia. The parasympathetic innervation of the ventricles (vagus nerves) on the origin of which there is an I-patent bundle, is associated with the coronary vessels, particularly those of the lesser circulation, and may be of importance in protecting against cardiac hyperkalemia. The importance of the parasympathetic innervation of the heart in arrhythmias induced by acute hyperkalemia was examined in dogs by unilateral vagotomy and vagal stimulation. The major ventricular dysrhythmia induced by hyperkalemia was abolished and preceded significantly earlier by acute vagal stimulation and by vagotomy. This shows that the parasympathetic innervation is essential for the occurrence of this type of ventricular dysrhythmia. Citation From the August 10 edition of Fox News' Fox & Friends GAYLE KING (CO-HOST): It's really interesting. You have a lot of women in the Republican Party, and they are very supportive of you and the way you were treated by what Trump said, and they are supportive of what you say and the way you have stood up to your husband and all that, because it is so rare, even among Democrats, for a woman to speak up against her spouse in that way. And so, I wanted to ask you, what do you really think of the women who are involved in the Republican Party who were Trump supporters? JAMIE HOLT: Well, you know, I think that Donald Trump has a lot of support in the country -- KING: A lot, a lot. [...] KING: It's really interesting, though, because I just want you to hear from women, because you have said to me, "I am a big believer in party unity," and yet, what you have experienced -- and other women in the party have experienced -- is that you have had supporters, men, women, and you even have some who are strong supporters in the Democratic Party, who have come out and said, "That is terrible. You should leave your husband. You should leave the party," and now they support you. I'd like to hear from those women, and I would love to hear from women on the other side. Q: How to create a lambda calculus/programming language for a GraphQL query I want to create a graphql query language to query an adjacency matrix, for example: query{ person(id:1) { friends { id name age } } } Or even just like this: query{ name age } This code will dynamically generate the query when the person object with the given ID is inserted into the graphql schema. For eg, if I pass '1' to the person here is the code for the query: import { GraphQLObjectType, GraphQLSchema, GraphQLString } from 'graphql'; const Schema = new GraphQLSchema({ query: new GraphQLObjectType({ name: 'query', fields: { person: { type: GraphQLObjectType, args: { id: { type: GraphQLString }, }, resolve: async(root, {id}) => { const personObject = await getPersonObject(id); return personObject;
