The Absorber is a first-person sci-fi exploration game. There will be no blood, but there will be some frustrating gameplay along the way. Enjoy some of the greatest starship and alien game mechanics you have ever seen in a 20+ minute gameplay video when you watch "The Absorber" gameplay. When you buy the "Absorber" download version, this playthrough will be part of your game when you play! Your Journey: As a mechanical crustacean, you are tasked with absorbing as many tasty-looking minions on your journey to escape the island. But, your crash landing has left you with a lot of dead minions that are in your way. To avoid eating these minions, and recharging your ship and pressing continue, you will need to use your color-sensitive, eye-balling skill to maneuver your way through the maze of minions. Then, you will find yourself deep inside the caverns of the volcano, with increasingly bigger minions that block your escape. You will need to squeeze through to make your way back to the surface, and hopefully get lucky enough to find that key that will at last unlock access to the blue path of escape. But, you will need to watch out for the malevolent minions that will try to stop you. That's the theory, but you can experience a basic gameplay experience with all of these elements when you play "The Absorber" through the gameplay video. What's new:

.A. Zup! S.A. is a French rap group created by Dj Aerodin in 1996. Originally a side-project of Le Noyau, the lineup comprising Frédéric Séguin, Kato, Di'Mendo, Astérix and Oxydin has remained mostly stable throughout the years. Career Zup!, along with the three-piece group from Strasbourg, Les Noyau, were among the pioneers of French rap during the 1990s. The hugely successful first release on the Tôt Sorti label, "Appelez pas les flics", became the anthem of the movement that had burst on the scene, a movement that was centred on the double meaning of the Alsatian word "zup" (cool it), a verbal wink of the eye that could justify anything, due to the word's less-rigid context of using it in place of the usual "t'es cool", along with the emergence of agrarian idioms developed by young families in the liberated suburbs of France. The group in that period had released two albums, Lui dit le Square and Ouvertures de Métropole, and had appeared on several French compilations. Zup!, was particularly involved in the sport, promoting sports-related lyrics. "Kaemo-KK's" and "K-Ball Style" are two of their best known sports-related works. However, the main reason that people recognise their name today is due to the inspiration of their label-mates, Les Noyau. Vu flics, translated into English as "Go for the cops (game)", was based on the catch phrase of a journalist whom Les Noyau would regularly interview, and was their best-known hit. The song was a satire that questioned the statements of a journalist whom had claimed that the lyrics of Vu flics, "You're our number 1, we'll teach you to go for the cops (game)", would be taken as a political statement without a certain amount of seriousness. The group's downfall was due to the fact that Les Noyau, who at the time, were working more on commercial releases than their own, were much more commercially successful. With a bit more success to come and another album to release, bosses De Scat, a subsidiary label of Universal, allowed the group to release an album that would be more "original" that way. They
