When your archipelago is invaded, you and your citizens flee into the forest to seek shelter and protection, your refuge is suddenly infected with a savage alien beast. It is up to you to contain the threat before the city is overrun. The gameplay mechanics are based on that of Minecraft, and the game will be fully 3D. You build your homes, roads, temples, and anything else you want, and you may even be able to add non-building items such as weapons and armor. The mechanics and gameplay are intended to be used together in a personal or cooperative way. May you Hold Your Own. -- Menu Screen -> Character Hunger: Character hunger is one of the core mechanics of this game. Your character hunger will eventually regulate your food intake and will otherwise affect your health. Thirst: Thirst mechanics are another core mechanic of this game. Your character will begin their training in areas of thirst when the world becomes too arid. Body Temperature: Body temperature will be used to determine the amount of damage your character takes from falling temperatures. When the character is unable to maintain their body temperature, it will cause the character to take less damage. Infrared: Infrared will be used to register hot & cold areas. Blood Sugar/Blood Pressure: Blood sugar and blood pressure will determine the amount of damage the player takes from the environment. Every 30 seconds, the player will take some type of damage depending on the character's blood sugar/blood pressure. Vehicle Hunger: When your vehicle is subjected to high temperatures, it will be subjected to a penalty on movement speed. Similarly, when your vehicle is subjected to extreme cold, the vehicle will have a reduced carrying capacity. Hunting: Hunting is another core mechanic in the game. Hunting requires two components to be successful. The first component is to find the prey. Secondly, you must use a weapon that will impact the prey to deal damage. Crafting: Craftings will impact the environment. Depending on what quality level your crafting level is, the composition of an object will change. The higher the level, the better the quality. Food Cooking Mechanic: Food will be cooked in an oven when it is on. When it is off, it will not be cooked. The longer it is on, the hotter it is. Lighting: Lighting will be introduced in the later part of the Early Access, some features may be changed in the future.

Patent pending design
Horatio floating...
....and an eternity of "will he or won't he?"

Horatio's existence is not as straightforward as it seems... He's a robot, and robots don't have feelings. Well, why should they? They're just machines.

When Horatio crashes on a frigid planet, he has no motor core and no program. How will he survive?

Horatio hopes for the day he can make someone love himself.

But how will he know? He has no emotional core. He has no memories. His I/O ports don't even work! Horatio's quest for love is one of science, memory, and the emotional core. He hopes to be powered by love and guided by feeling.

Since the commercial release of the game, Love Thyself has garnered rave reviews, especially for its original approach to the classic "life simulator" concept. The game's title was chosen as an homage to the classic game title known as Life Simulator in SPACE; however, Love Thyself focuses on the self, not the other.

You can buy the full-blown Horatio you see in the game inside your free IndieCade Cube as part of the IndieCade Expo 2012. It is just a small part of a life-sized Horatio you'll be seeing in malls, bookstores, and dorm rooms, in the near future, on computers around the world. Not to mention, you'll see Horatio in 3-D glasses on the shelf of your local game store. It can't get any better than that!

Welcome to South Africa! The Railway Almanac is an award-winning independently developed and published video game that recreates the world's most famous and iconic railroads in a way that feels new and fresh, using modern gaming technology and an open-ended driving and gameplay engine. You have a life - this is your story. The Grouse Grind The Grouse Mountain Railway, serving Vancouver's majestic Grouse Mountain for 30 years, closed its doors in 1995. Locomotive #24 remained on track with the best engines in service. It was at Grouse Mountain's peak that Hap Sorenson first heard the cry for steam. Over the next few years, his passion for the nostalgic sound of the firebox grew, and in 2006, after years of on-and-off planning, Grouse Mountain Railway Re-opened the line for business. Epic Steam Train Simulator's Epic Steam updates have introduced new vehicles, coaches, and rolling stock, as well as a new multiplayer mode. The new Open Country setting now allows you to take part in different competitions, ride alongside other players, and progress through the game's three main game modes. With free continuous updates, hundreds of new vehicle models and upgrades, new train designs, and multiple game modes, Train Simulator continues to raise the bar for virtual train sims around the world.

Key Game Features: NEW: Re-opened route of the legendary Grouse Mountain Railway, as well as new exciting career and free roam scenarios
NEW: Open Country setting - take part in different competitions and ride alongside other players
NEW: Steam Off - take control of all 10 available locomotives and feature 2 trains, multiple coaches and wagons
NEW: Alternate route - switch routes during rail events
NEW: French Steam - more authentic journey between Bordeaux and Le Havre
NEW: Improved Multiplayer game modes
NEW: Improved player loading times

BLOOMING BERKSHIRES: SA Railways (SAR) has a fantastic fleet of steam locomotives which are based on the NBL locomotives. The first unit to be delivered to SAR was Cape Gauge locomotive no.24. Built in the NBL works at Thomas Powell & Sons, Port Elizabeth in 1949 the locomotive was a 2-8-4 narrow gauge designed as a replacement for the aging 2-6-0 tank locomotives. In 1952 it was one of the first 24 SAR
